Duration: 2 years, renewable according to performance

Context:

The World Organisation for Animal Health (OIE) is the intergovernmental organisation responsible for improving animal health worldwide. The standards it develops for the trade of live animals and products of animal origin are recognized by the World Trade Organization as reference international sanitary rules (http://www.oie.int/fr/).

The OIE, then known as the « Office international des épizooties », was created on the 25th of January, 1924. Its headquarters are based in Paris. It comprises 182 Member Countries and is present on all continents through 12 Representations or Bureaus in total.

In addition to international standard setting, the OIE is actively engaged in supporting its Member Countries to strengthen their national veterinary services (VS) in order to be able to effectively implement those standards relative to animal and zoonotic disease control. The key OIE programme in this regard is the Performance of Veterinary Services (PVS) Pathway which mainly involves expert missions to Member Countries upon request to systematically evaluate their VS. This assessment is based on the PVS Tool, which methodically evaluates a range of critical competencies including human resources, education, legislation, technical capacity, stakeholder engagement and infrastructure, among others.

Additional OIE support programmes for Members related to the PVS Pathway focus more specifically on legislation, veterinary education, veterinary laboratories and veterinary statutory bodies. In recent years, the quality of education of veterinarians and veterinary paraprofessionals (VPPs) has become a particular area of interest for the OIE. In that regard, the OIE has developed guidelines for the expected competencies of veterinarians (Day 1 graduates) and a Veterinary Education Core Curriculum.

Currently, an OIE ad hoc group on VPPs is meeting on a regular basis to develop similar guidelines regarding competencies and curriculum for VPPs. Additionally, the ad hoc group is participating in various outreach activities to communicate the value of VPPs in the delivery of veterinary services and the importance of ensuring high quality training for them. The finalisation of the curriculum is likely to lead to some field projects involving the training of VPPs, their integration into national veterinary services and reviews of the legal and regulatory frameworks necessary to facilitate that integration.
