

Prof Gerardo Caja

Born in Arnedo (La Rioja, Spain) is Professor in Animal Science at the Faculty of Veterinary of the Univ. Autònoma of Barcelona (Bellaterra, Spain). Degree in Agricultural Engineering and Ph.D. in ruminant nutrition by the Univ. Politécnica of Madrid (Spain). He did his previous teaching and research in the Univ. Politécnica of Madrid and Univ. Politécnica of Valencia. He also did stages of research in UK (Univ. Nottingham), France (INRA) and USA (Univ. Minnesota-St Paul, Univ. Wisconsin-Madison and Univ. California-Davis).

He is currently member of the Spanish standardization (AENOR) and advising (CEIEA) committees and of the international working group on standardization (ISO) on livestock electronic identification. He was elected member of the Catalan Academy of Veterinary Sciences in 2005 and awarded with the International Dairy Production Award of the American Dairy Science Association (ADSA) in 2006.

His main areas of research are dairy ruminant production, including physiology and nutrition, and livestock electronic identification in which he advised 37 Ph.D. and M.Sc. Thesis and published more than 300 scientific and extension papers and granted 4 international patents. He also conducted different cooperation and development projects and consultation with private and public companies and organizations (European Commission, FAO).